Cake decorating ideas for boy birthday

Hannah Kirshner is a food stylist, recipe developer and occasional wedding cake baker based in Brooklyn, NY. She is the founder and editor of Sweets & Bitters, a blog and mini cookbook series. You can tweet your cake hack questions to her on @sweetsnbitters. This is the ultimate wedding planning conundrum: You don't want to be topless, but you want everything to be really special. Well, for once you can have your cake and eat it too. Wedding cakes tend to be outrageously expensive (I know, because when I make them, the amount I charge is generally proportional to the anxiety of preparing a flawless cake in time for the customer's big day). But thanks to these smart hacks, you can save a lot without sacrificing style — and the best is, they don't involve any baking on your part. With minimal planning and 15 minutes of help from a creative friend or family member, this simple trick will help you save big bucks. Multiply the price per serving (estimated below) by the number of guests to see only how much. Depending on the size of your wedding, we're talking hundreds or even thousands of dollars. For an urban wedding: Tier Up Do you get choked thinking about the cost of a wedding, and not in a good way? By piling pastries on a tiered stand, you can reach the spectacle of a traditional wedding cake without the traditional price tag. Serve a dessert that says something about you as a couple, instead of the same old cake. Bait thrift stores, browse etsy, or DIY a nice cake stand, and ask your caterer or a designated relative to stack it high with your favorite sweets. We had this foamcore stand from NYCake, spray-painted it gold, and trimmed it with satin lint attached with foam-mounting tape (all for under $100). For the cake alternatives, we chose fluffy coconut doughnuts from Peter Pan Donut & Pastry Shop. They carry all the visual impact of a fancier confession, without the drain on your account. Traditional wedding cake: $8 to $20 per serving Doughnuts: $1.50 to $3 per serving For a simple country wedding: Go Florall Instead of ordering an ornately decorated cake, ask for simple buttercream icing and decorate it yourself with fresh flowers. According to Betsy Thorleifson of Nine Cakes in Brooklyn, a simpler cake for 50 guests is a minimum of $500 during high season ($250 during the off-season), compared to $750 for an ornate cake. Snag a handful of the flowers you already use for décor, or if you have a garden, choose your own for about zero extra dollars. Even as you go all out and buy flowers just for the cake, you'll have hard-pressed tossing more than $100 — still much less than you'd pay for an ornate one. Classic farm flowers like dahlias, zinnias, and bachelor's buttons not only look but also hold well. It is best to use organic or edible flowers, and be sure to wash them. You'll have other things to worry about on your wedding day, so ask a friend to place the flowers on the cake a few hours in question. Simply trim the stems short and stick them into the icing. Beware of toxic plant varieties — if you are unsure, wrap the stems in plastic. Cluster the blossoms on top of the cake and gracefully spiral them along and leave some gaps to put the eye to rest. If you mess up the icing, net cover it with leaves. There's no need to be too fussy — fresh flowers seem good-looking matter that. Ornate wedding cake: $12 to $25 per serving Simple cake with fresh flowers: $5 to $10 per serving For a destination wedding: Hot sheet Fancy, tiered wedding cakes are like stilettos: They look offside downside, but may be more trouble than they're worth - especially at a beach or destination wedding. In fact, at traditional weddings, some couples choose to display a formal tiered cake and hide additional sheet cake in the kitchen to actually serve the guests. But why not have completely forgotten, and just ordered a large sheet cake? Any bakery will make one, and you don't have to worry about it topping up or melting in the sun. For a truly tropical effect, cover the table in banana leaves. (Even if you're not on a tropical island, you can have them frozen from a Latin American or Southeast Asian market for about $2.50.) Surround the cake with colorful, exotic fruit (you can fill a shopping bag for $50), andpalms plucked from overhead (or bought from a florist for about $5 to $10 each). Use some supermarket gel icing to write something romantic - a favorite quote or your names. Thecost is easily half of a tiered cake. You can spend the savings on an extra night vanhoneyymooning. Tiered Wedding Cake: $8 to $20 per servingSheet cake: $1 to $4 per serving of Delicacy decorations is a great way to create unique effects and patterns on cakes. Dum Dums are perfect for birthday cake decorations as they come in so many fun and beautiful colors. What you need: • Dum Dums • Icing • Cake mix • Optional: Sprinkles for the Dum Dums, choose any fun colors you want. We decided on rainbow. If you want to do the same, here are the flavors for every color: Red - Cherry, Watermelon, or StrawberryOrange - OrangeJyellow - MangoGreen - Sour AppleBlue - Blu Raspberry, Blueberry, or Cotton CandyViolet - GrapeViolet Red - Punch Fruit (We didn't include pink, but if you like, use Bubble Gum Dum Directions: 1 We used a cake mix to save time, but feel free to use your favorite cake recipe. We think white icing looks best against the brightly coloured Dum Dums. 2. Decorate with Dum Dums. Cross the Dum Dums along the bottom of the cake, side by side, all the way around. The vines are handy for keeping the tasty canned decorations in place! 3. Final touch. Do whatever you want to complete your cake. Have fun with it! But times have changed. These days, it seems that no child's party is complete without a sugar-filled masterpiece in the form of a shimmering biicorn head or a Lightning McQueen race car. While the trend may be good for Instagram photos, that's bad news for parents' budgets. Birthday parties: children daydream about them, while their parents often fear them. Before social Read moreYou knows what makes for an excellent birthday cake décor? Random little toys your child already has. Case in point: This creation by a mother named Beth Linzell. She picked up a chocolate cake from the store and then raided her three-year-old's room for trinkets to place on top of it. She found tractors and Paw Patrol coins, adding a pair of chocolate chips and a sparkling wine candle. Child thought it was the best thing to ever exist, the mother wrote on Facebook.Photo: Courtesy of Beth LinzellMy colleague Beth she did something similar when her child requested a cake with a very specific scene involving characters from Cars. We just ordered an empty cake and arranged toys on top, she says. Any easy-to-swipe toys would work-dinos, Lego minifigures, plastic fairy dolls, teacups, trains. Get creative. Make a whole diorama if you feel compelled. Remove them just before serving and rinse them off before thouring puts them back in your child's toy chest. BRIAN WOODCOCK If there's no cake, is it really a birthday party? Of course not. While, of course, everyone has their preferences, and we'll let some people just don't like birthday cake (maybe for them you can choose one of these chocolate pie recipes), but for the most part a ripe confession is the right thing to do.
